FDNY officer suspended for sex crime charges

Los Angeles. The 21-year veteran is awaiting extradition to California to face sex crime charges against children.

A captain with the FDNY has been suspended without pay after being arrested on charges of sex crimes against two children in California.

A FDNY spokesperson confirmed Sunday that Wilbert Riera, 51, has worked for the FDNY for 21 years, and is based on Staten Island. The FDNY declined to confirm the warrant charges the EMS captain was arrested on.

The 30 day suspension without pay is the maximum that is allowed by law, according to the FDNY.

An FBI task force made the arrest on Friday evening, according to numerous media reports, and the allegations reportedly stem from a Sept. 12 incident that involved two children in Hollywood.

A LAPD spokeswoman Sunday said that her office was not releasing details from Riera's arrest warrant and would not have any information on his arrest until he arrived in Los Angeles, presumably some time on Monday.

Riera previously served as president of Brentwood Legion Ambulance from 2001-2002, according to the organization's website.

According to The Daily News, Riera has been given at least three FDNY awards for helping to save lives.

Albany. Cuomo makes visit to Afghanistan

Gov. Andrew Cuomo traveled to Afghanistan on Saturday to learn more about counterterrorism and global threats that affect security in New York, according to the governor's office.

The trip was not announced in advance because of security concerns, the governor's office said.

Cuomo met with troops from New York, including New York's 10th Mountain Division out of Fort Drum, which has 900 members stationed in Afghanistan. Cuomo also met with New York National Guard members, and said he "recognized many of them" from Hurricane Sandy and storm relief work in the state.

On a conference call, Cuomo said he spent the majority of his time on talks about how to "handle" the "sudden growth spurt in terrorism."

Cuomo said his "goal" for New York is to "have the most sophisticated homeland defense system ever designed by any state, period."

Also this weekend, the governor's campaign said that he and his Republican opponent Rob Astorino would have two debates before the election.

Two with guns arrested in subway

Two males were arrested in unrelated incidents trying to carry guns on to the subway, officials said Sunday.

Cops said that Danari Aiken, 21, was spotted Wednesday asking strangers to swipe him through the turnstiles at West 34th Street and 8th Avenue. When cops questioned him they found he had an active warrant and was carrying a Rohm revolver, loaded with live rounds.

Aiken, who has prior arrests for burglary and robbery, was charged with Criminal Possession of a Weapon and Unlawful Solicitation, police said.

Hours later inside of the Utica Avenue station in Brooklyn, Kamani Moore, 19, used a MetroCard that didn't belong to him to swipe his way into the station, cops said.

While he was being arrested, police said that they found a loaded semiautomatic firearm that was against the inside of his upper thigh. Moore, who was later charged with Criminal Possession of a Defaced Firearm and Theft of Service, was held on $1,500 bail. METRO

Teen stabbed to death, three others injured

Bronx. According to reports, the incident started at a house party.

A Bronx teen died after he was stabbed early Sunday. Three other young men were also stabbed, according to the NYPD.

The incident took place at 2194 Barnes Ave. just south of Pelham Parkway and east of White Plains Road. Officers arrived to find four males with stab wounds to the chest and shoulder.

Justin Fallu, 14, of East 243rd Street, was pronounced dead when he arrived at Jacobi Hospital.

Two other victims were 18 years old, and one was 17. They're all being treated.

The police have not made any arrests, and the investigation continues.

According to the New York Times, Fallu and the other victims had been attending a house party at the Barnes Avenue residence.

There were no arrests as of Sunday afternoon, and the police said that the victims and potential witnesses to the crime were not cooperating in the investigation.

A neighbor interviewed by the New York Times, Nick West, said that Fallu's parents were "devastated," and that the teen was a "young man with morals and principles who, unfortunately, turned out to be a statistic."

Investigating

The police are searching for leads in the death of Justin Fallu, 14, but haven't made any arrests so far.

First French bookstore since 2009 now open

Albertine, a French bookstore, located inside the Cultural Services Center of the French Embassy, opened over the weekend and is the city's first all-French bookstore since 2009.

The bookstore contains more than 14,000 titles, ranging from classics such as Marcel Proust to contemporaries such as Michel Houellebecq. The store bills itself as having the largest selection of French literature in the U.S.

"Those passionate about books and culture can immerse themselves in literature and reading in a setting conducive to reflection, inspiration and discussion," said French diplomat and cultural counselor Antonin Baudry.

Albertine will host a six-night festival from Oct. 14 to the 19, that will feature several artists and thinkers from both countries. METRO

Brooklyn. Dumbo Arts Fest draws crowd

The Dumbo Arts Festival came to a close on Sunday evening. The three-day happening attracted hundreds of artists and studios with 200,000 visitors in attendance.

"I do my own illustrations, so I wanted to see what other artists are doing. It's really interesting and exciting to me," said Scarlet Toben.

Nicole Hard, who lives in the area, said the arts festival is a chance for the neighborhood to shine.

Summer lingers at the Ice King

To get to the Lemon Ice King of Corona, especially on a day when the 7 train is running express, you walk from Junction Boulevard in Queens.

Under the elevated tracks, you go past the botanicas and tarot card readers and tortillerias, the women at sidewalk stands blending fruit into juice. You walk past the signs for Corona Oral Surgery — the ones that inexplicably advertise OB-GYN! OB-GYN! — and turn onto 104th Street, past barber shops.

You keep walking until Corona turns Italian — with the wooden telephone poles painted red, white and green. You pass Leo's Latticini and Mama's bakery. On past the churches and funeral parlors, then a left on Corona Avenue, walking on until you see the sign for THE LEMON ICE KING OF CORONA.

Since 1944, they've been making the ice.

They don't mix flavors and don't give out samples; while they offer plastic utensils, it isn't correct to use them. You eat your ice directly from the cup of pleated paper. You do this while you standing on the sidewalk. People show up in crowds, in waves, the line bending at the curb.

It's an Indian summer. The locust trees along the sidewalk are turning gold. The Mets have just one game left to play. At the Lemon Ice King, the candy apples have appeared, another sign of the changing season. A new crowd arrives, taking vivid colors into their hands—pistachio green, cherry red, blueberry blue. No one buys a candy apple. They're not quite ready to give up the ice.

Obama: US intel underestimated ISIS inside Syria

Help. Obama has sought to build a wider coalition effort to weaken Islamic State.

U.S. intelligence agencies underestimated Islamic State activity inside Syria, which has become "ground zero" for jihadists worldwide, President Barack Obama said in a CBS television interview broadcast on Sunday.

Conversely, the United States overestimated the ability of the Iraqi army to fight the militant groups, Obama said in a "60 Minutes" interview taped, days after the U.S. president made his case at the United Nations for action.

Citing earlier comments by James Clapper, director of national intelligence, Obama acknowledged that U.S. intelligence underestimated what had been taking place in Syria.

Islamic militants went underground when U.S. Marines quashed al Qaeda in Iraq with help from Iraq's tribes, he said.

"But over the past couple of years, during the chaos of the Syrian civil war, where essentially you have huge swaths of the country that are completely ungoverned, they were able to reconstitute themselves and take advantage of that chaos," Obama said.

"And so this became ground zero for jihadists around the world."

Ferguson. Suspects sought in shootings of two police officers

Police were seeking suspects on Sunday in what appeared to be the unrelated shootings of two police officers in and near the Missouri city of Ferguson, which remains on edge after a black teenager was shot to death by a white police officer last month.

The Saturday night shooting of an officer in the St. Louis suburb of Ferguson did not seem linked to peaceful protests occurring elsewhere in the city, police said, nor was it connected to a separate shooting involving an off-duty police officer in St. Louis early Sunday.

Neither officer received life-threatening injuries, according to the St. Louis County Police Department.

Groups protesting near the scene of Saturday night's shooting and at Ferguson police headquarters remained peaceful, witnesses said. REUTERS

Shooting at club leaves 15 hurt, including 11-year-old

Fifteen people, many of them teenagers and one an 11-year-old girl, were injured in a shooting at a Miami nightclub that resulted in a chaotic scene early on Sunday, police and fire officials said.

One young male patient was in critical condition after the shooting just before 1 a.m., said Miami Fire Rescue Captain Ignatius Carroll Jr.

Police did not know how many shooters were involved or what prompted gunfire to erupt at the club called The Spot, Miami Police Department spokeswoman Frederica Burden said. REUTERS

Al Qaeda figure Fadhli killed by US strike in Syria: Monitoring group

Rubble of destroyed building, allegedly belonging to the Nusra Front, following the U.S.-led coalition's air strikes against the ISIS on a residential area in northern Aleppo, Syria. / GETTY IMAGES

Social media. Islamist militants have said there were unconfirmed reports that Fadhli had been killed.

A jihadist Twitter account said the leader of the al Qaeda-linked Khorasan group was killed in a U.S. air strike in Syria, SITE monitoring service said on Sunday after several days of uncertainty over whether he survived the raid.

A U.S. official said on Sept. 24 that the United States believed Mohsin al-Fadhli, a senior al Qaeda operative, had been killed in a strike a day earlier, but the Pentagon said several hours later it was still investigating what had happened to him.

In a tweet posted on Sept. 27, a jihadist offered condolences for the death of Kuwaiti-born Fadhli, otherwise known as Abu Asmaa al-Kuwati or Abu Asmaa al-Jazrawi, said SITE, a U.S.-based organization that monitors militant groups online.

In Washington, Tony Blinken, deputy White House national security adviser, said U.S. officials could not yet confirm the death.

U.S. officials have described Khorasan as a network of seasoned al Qaeda fighters with battlefield experience mostly in Pakistan and Afghanistan that is now working in league with al Qaeda's Syrian affiliate, the Nusra Front. REUTERS

OMG! Tech company that lets the customer decide what to pay

TechBoy is a remote help desk. / COLOURBOX

"There's no such thing as a free lunch," is a popular phrase — but apparently you can get IT services for gratis. TechBoy, a Brazilian computer solutions startup, only ask customers to pay what they think the service is worth or not at all. It might not sound like a terribly shrewd business model; however, 70 percent of customers paid them something and normally what the work is really worth. "And those who didn't pay are not considered bad, because this is part of our purpose, and we know they market our business through word of mouth so that we can then increase our client base," says founder Robson Felix.

Since the remote help desk's inception — managed by Felix, 27, based in Riccione, Italy, and his partner who is currently located in Rio de Janeiro — they've completed a total of 3,240 services and covered the start-up's costs in just two months. In fact, the duo, which provides 24-hour support with everything from troubleshooting and viruses to online shopping, will soon recruit a new technician in New York.

Despite expanding their operation, TechBoy finds that potential customers may steer clear of the "charity" work for fear of it being potentially fraudulent or a scam.

The company still gets a lot of emails and phone calls checking that its outfit is genuine. "But that's pretty normal, because people are not used to this kind of business," says Felix. "That's why our approach is very discreet: After the service is done, we send an email asking if the client wants to collaborate — there's no pressure or deadline. They do what they want."

WANISE MARTINEZ, MWN

Visit us online at Metro.us/omg for more interviews.

Start-up

TechBoy's service:

- Their solution is to provide support through a report on any computer complaints that can be taken to a repair shop, which can then tackle the problem. "That way we're present and supportive, and that's exactly the point of the start-up," says Felix.
- "I've always assisted people more than I should; I truly believe in courtesy when it comes to technology," he explains.
- TechBoy does have its flaws: waiting time, like with tradesmen, is variable depending on workload, and the small team can't deal with all issues.

Mount Ontake

At least 31 feared dead near peak of Japanese volcano

Thirty-one people were presumed dead on Sunday near the peak of a Japanese volcano that erupted a day earlier, catching hundreds of hikers off guard as it belched out clouds of rock and ash.

The deaths on Mount Ontake, 125 miles west of Tokyo, were the first from a Japanese volcanic eruption since 1991.

Police said the 31 were found in "cardiopulmonary arrest," but declined to confirm their deaths pending a formal examination, as per Japanese custom. Public broadcaster NHK and the Kyodo news agency later reported that four males had been confirmed dead.

SMOKE RISING FROM MOUNT ONTAKE / GETTY IMAGES

An official in the area said rescue efforts had been called off due to rising levels of toxic gas near the peak, as well as approaching nightfall.

Hundreds of people, including children, were stranded on the mountain, a popular hiking site, after it erupted without warning on Saturday.

Most made their way down later on Saturday, but about 40 spent the night near the peak. REUTERS

Older siblings have a big impact on school choices

College. A new study finds that families tend to gravitate toward the same types of schools.

One-third of younger siblings apply to schools their brothers and sisters attend. / PHOTOS.COM

As many high school students agonize over where to go to college, it turns out they turn to a very familiar source for advice and guidance: their older brothers and sisters.

A new study by Harvard University and the College Board finds that older siblings have a greater influence on college choice than previously believed. In fact, one out of three students end up applying to the college or university their siblings attended. The study also found that 20 percent of younger siblings actually ended up attending the same schools as their older family members.

The researchers also discovered that whole families usually attended the same types of schools, meaning that the adult children in a family all would end up enrolling in either a 2-year program or a 4-year one.

Joshua Goodman, a Harvard professor who co-authored the study, suspects that part of the reason siblings tend to gravitate toward the same schools is because older brothers and sisters can help advise younger students about financial aid and academic programs at the schools they attend.

Metro, UN challenge you to a green city

Join the 10th edition of the world's largest photography competition.

Today, Metro is thrilled to launch the 10th anniversary edition of Metro Photo Challenge, the world's largest photography competition. This year's contest sees Metro team up in a unique global partnership with the United Nations in concert with last week's U.N. Climate Summit taking place in New York City.

In celebration of 10 years of challenging amateur and professional photographers to take the most stunning images, Metro and the United Nations will focus on a new dimension to the contest: the importance and impact of photography in the urban landscape.

Metro's partnership with the U.N. presents an extraordinary opportunity for metropolitans around the world to participate in a call-to-action on the vital issue of climate change, to use the power of photography to motivate positive change in an issue that affects every global citizen. To this end, the Metro Photo Challenge will have a special category — "My Green City" — dedicated to profiling our interconnectivity between urban dwellers and the ever-changing climate.

"To quote U.N. Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, 'Climate change is not a far-off problem, it is happening now, with real consequences,'" said Afsane Bassir-Pour, director of the U.N. Regional Information Center in Brussels. "'But,' adds the secretary general, 'change is in the air.' And Metro International's decision to dedicate the 10th Metro Photo Challenge to the climate is another sign of this change."

Metro Photo Challenge was introduced 10 years ago in Sweden and ran globally for the first time in 2007. The contest has become a truly credible and important event for professional and amateur photographers alike. In 2013, 40,000 photographers submitted more than 120,000 images, making Metro Photo Challenge the world's largest photography competition.

My City's Magic

At first glance it's the city buzz, crowds and traffic that fill the eye of the urban dweller, but if you take a closer look, every detail, face, street or object in your city is unique — unique in its life, history and culture. The city can both be beautiful and rough, have a bright and dark side to it, which is all a part of the magic that empowers urban spaces to be the grandest places created by humans. But what makes the magic of your city? And can you capture those unique details?

BRUNO ANDRADE

Urban Escape

As much as we care about these beehives of cities, we also tend to want to escape from them once in a while — the crowds, traffic, the routine and constant buzz. We tend to look for the silence of nature, the refreshment of a short change or this secret oasis within the city no one ever noticed but you. The escape clears your mind, refreshes your soul and even wipes the board clean. So do you know about this urban escape, and can you capture it? It might be a physical world, a mental place or even a companion you turn to for this getaway.

JULIA NAPOLSKAYA

My Green City

Our cities are very vulnerable to environmental impact, yet at the same time they can provide a great platform as a leading force in the battle against climate change. Affordable, scalable solutions are now available, enabling us all to shift towards cleaner, more sustainable and thus greener cities. Can you capture positive changes made toward combating climate change in your city, to give hope for the future of our planet and humanity? Metro Photo Challenge 2014 and the United Nations invite you to showcase that taking climate action in your urban landscape can save money and promote other benefits such as cleaner air, better well-being for everyone.

DiCaprio the world's most eligible bachelor?

George Clooney went and got himself hitched this weekend, so that means one thing: We need to find Hollywood's Next Most Eligible Bachelor. It's a tough act to follow, to be sure, but someone out there has to be nearly as adept at being rakish and charming, looking great in a tux and squiring an unending stream of enviable girlfriends to glamorous events while avoiding talk of marriage. So, ladies, who is the new reigning king of single Hollywood? The smart money is on the ever-debonair Comedy Store heir Pauly Shore, who oozes confidence and sophistication. But Shore has some serious competition: David Spade and Ryan Seacrest seem pretty darn eligible, no? But the most obvious choice is noted environmentalist, serious actor type and serial model dater Leonardo DiCaprio — which is awkward, since Clooney isn't such a fan of the "Great Gatsby" star. (He revealed as much in an Esquire profile last year.) I'm sure he would've preferred Shore, but hey, that's not up to him. Enjoy the honeymoon, George!

Leo might want to consider trimming that beard with his new title.

Amal Alamuddin and George Clooney tied the knot this weekend, though reports suggest that the couple may be having another ceremony in Venice as you read this. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Readers, please understand we don't think any of these One Direction members are terrorists!

'Daily Show' goes in One Direction for a joke that offends fans

The folks at "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" learned not to kick the hornet's nest that is One Direction fandom. Fans lit up Twitter with the hashtag #thedailyshowgonetoofar after Jessica Williams mentioned the group in a joke. "Just as you were talking, a new terrorist group formed with one member each from ISIS, al-Nusra, al-Qaeda, Hamas, One Direction and the Zetas drug cartel," Williams reported. Fans assumed Williams was poking fun at One Direction member Zayn Malik, who is Muslim. A sample of the tone of the responding tweets: "I suggest you take 8,381 steps back before I actually kill you." The writers for the show, for their part, did have a response, tweeting, "We didn't know the band members' names, religions, hobbies, etc. Just knew they were popular. But not this popular. #whoa"

Would Gwyneth give JLaw a cold play?

Gwyneth Paltrow is reportedly against the idea of her kids meeting dad Chris Martin's new girlfriend, Jennifer Lawrence. "Gwyneth was absolutely stunned when Chris told her he wants to introduce the kids to Jennifer," a source tells Star magazine. And that would've made a recent crossover super awkward. According to photo agency X17, Paltrow narrowly escaped seeing Lawrence when she picked up her children at Martin's Malibu home mere minutes before the "Hunger Games" star arrived.

"They missed each other by about 10 minutes," a photographer camped out at the home reports. "They would have passed each other in Chris' driveway with the kids and that would have been so awkward. I have a feeling Gwyneth would not have been nice to Jennifer."

'Welcome to' an embarrassing talk with Kristen Wiig

Celebrity interviews can be tricky — especially if you haven't actually seen the movie — which is what happened when "Daybreak" reporter Chris Parente spoke with "The Skeleton Twins" stars Kristen Wiig and Bill Hader, asking Wiig a nudity-related question that had more to do with another Wiig film, "Welcome to Me."

"Oh, you're not nude in this one!" said Parente.

"The movie you want to go see is 'Skeleton Twins.' Kristen is fully clothed in it, I'm fully clothed in it," Bill Hader corrected.

"I thought there were muppets in this," Parente joked.

Ben Kingsley chills out

Interview. To record his "Boxtrolls" baddie's voice, the Oscar-winner had to lay back in a reclining chair.

Don't expect the characters in "Boxtrolls" to look like the actors who voice them. / LAIKA ENTERTAINMENT

Here's a fun game: Sir Ben Kingsley has made a lot of films since "Gandhi" in 1982, but at least one of them was a terrible experience. So take a look at Kingsley's IMDb page and try to figure out which filmmaking experience of his was so toxic it prompted him to torch the screenplay. No, really, he did. But of course he's not saying which film it was.

"I actually burned the script," Kingsley says while promoting his latest film, the stop-motion animated film "Boxtrolls" — which we can rule out from being the offending production in question. "I had a ceremonial burning of the script. The director was such an awful person who was so discourteous to the cast and so amateurish. It was a colossal waste of good energy and time."

One way to avoid any repeats of such an experience is taking matters into his own hands. "I've created a production company with my wife. We've got six films on our slate, and one of them is about a naval admiral," Kingsley says. "I want to play a man in uniform. I've got tremendous respect for that life that they lead."

And it will likely be a far cry from his "Boxtrolls" character, the devious Archibald Snatcher, who looks and sounds nothing like Kingsley. "My physicality on screen — the puppet — is very unlike my own silhouette," he says. "I actually was lying down for most of my recordings. I know the recording studio quite well, and I've got some good mates who work there, and they rigged me up a reclining chair so that I could lie almost horizontal. ... I wanted it to come from a very relaxed part of me."

In the future

The voice

Kingsley has more voiceover work lined up already, with Jon Favreau's take on "The Jungle Book," which will use Kingsley's voice as Bagheera the leopard. "This script is probably a lot closer to Kipling than the original Disney one was," he says.

No word yet on whether he'll be doing this job lying down as well, but it's safe to say he won't torch the script.

Box office. Washington managed to take down 'The Boxtrolls' with 'The Equalizer'

With more than $35 million in ticket sales this weekend, the top spot on the U.S. and Canadian charts went to "The Equalizer," a thriller starring Denzel Washington as a trained killer who comes to the defense of the helpless, in this case a young Russian prostitute (Chloe Grace Moretz) in the grips of a human trafficking ring.

Young adult drama "The Maze Runner" dropped to second place after winning the box office race last weekend. "Maze Runner" earned $17.5 million at domestic theaters from Friday through Sunday, according to tracking firm Rentrak.

Trashing conventions

Game shows. Craig Ferguson is leaving his "Late Late Show" post soon, but he's already got a new game show.

The show airs on WPIX. Go to www.celebnamegame.com for times. / MICHAEL BECKER, FREMANTLEMEDIA

When it was announced that Craig Ferguson would leave "The Late Late Show," a great sadness swept over everyone who loves his low-key style. Luckily, you can find him on the new game show, "Celebrity Name Game," which pairs celebrities with non-celeb contestants, who try to win cash by answering pop culture trivia questions.

Ferguson has been working on the show for some time now, with many episodes already filmed. "It is beginning to, some people would say, 'fall apart.' I would say, 'get better,'" he jokes.

Quoted

"I felt that when we were most successful in the late-night show, it was lovingly trashing the conventions of it." Ferguson

FERGUSON

For one thing, not all contestants know the celebrities that make up the answers. One group had never heard of Anna Paquin, no matter how many times Ferguson said her name. "We had the same trouble in the next part with the next question. The answer was Dennis Quaid, and I said, 'All right, it rhymes with Mennis Wade,' and someone pressed the buzzer and said, 'Mennis Wade,' as being the answer."

Minor issues aside, Ferguson says the new show will look somewhat familiar. "I felt that when we were most successful in the late-night show, it was lovingly trashing the conventions of it. What I wanted to do was find a game show that wasn't so complicated that you couldn't do that."

Ferguson made the show with Courteney Cox and David Arquette, both of whom appear on the show. Asked why he's working with them, he answers, "Well, you know, they're very powerful people. They can have you hurt if you say no. And also, it was a good idea."

How a caffeine habit can help you

National Coffee Day. Java drinkers have more going for them than a morning buzz.

Coffee's benefits kick in at around two cups a day. / WAVEBREAK MEDIA

With about 2.25 billion cups being drunk daily worldwide, coffee hardly needs its own marketing holiday. But it turns out that the best may be yet to come.

Lest you think that all caffeine is created equal, scientists at the French Institute of Research for Development just this month sequenced the genome of the coffee plant, say that the genes responsible for producing caffeine evolved in an entirely different way from tea and chocolate. "A genome sequence could be a significant step toward improving coffee," one of the lead researchers said.

But science has already done plenty to justify your regular caffeine intake. On this National Coffee Day, we round up just a few of the reasons.

1 Drinking more than a cup of coffee a day reduced stroke risk by as much as 25 percent among women, compared with those who drank less.

2 Hydrate away! Regular coffee drinkers, who have built up a tolerance to caffeine, do not experience any diuretic effects from it.

3 Coffee also doesn't stimulate stomach acid production, cause ulcers or acid reflux, and can in fact help rather than hurt those at risk of developing gallstones.

4 Moderation is key when it comes to the heart: About two cups a day can cut heart failure risk by up to 11 percent, but five or more could be harmful.

5 Type 2 diabetes risk was similarly cut by 11 percent in people who upped their coffee drinking by more than one cup a day over four years — and those who cut their intake saw their risk rise by 17 percent.

6 Coffee protects against some oral and pharyngeal (tongue, soft palate, tonsils) cancers, with those who drink more than four cups a day having a 49 percent lower risk. That protection falls with each fewer cup.

7 Coffee slows the formation of scar tissue on the liver caused by excessive drinking.

Venom bites back at cancer

Treatment hope. Scientists are abuzz about the potential curative properties in bees' stingers.

The venom in insect stings and reptile bites was found to kill breast and skin cancer cells in lab testing.
ALAN LAMB, FLICKR

A promising new lead in the search for a cancer cure has turned up in a place that most people naturally avoid.

A team from the University of Illinois has discovered that bee, snake and scorpion venom contains toxins that can kill cancerous tumors.

"We have safely used venom toxins in tiny nanometer-sized particles to treat breast cancer and melanoma cells in the laboratory," says research leader Dr. Dipanjan Pan.

The venom is encapsulated in tightly packed nanoparticles to avoid leakage and potentially harmful side effects such as damage to nerve cells or the heart muscle, blood clotting and bleeding beneath the skin.

The potential life-saving effects of these deadly toxins have been investigated before. Ancient civilizations explored their use in the treatment of arthritis and neurological disorders. But modern lab-synthesized versions of the venom's potent proteins and peptides ensure that there will be no issues with large-scale production.

The substance from bees, melittin, prevents cancer cells from multiplying. Pan explains that "venom from snakes and scorpions will work by inhibiting cancer stem cell-signaling pathways."

The team, who presented their findings at the National Meeting of the American Chemical Society in San Francisco, believes that it will take another three to five years until the first human trials can commence.

Quote

"These particles, which are camouflaged from the immune system, take the toxin directly to the cancer cells, sparing normal tissue." Pan

Negotiate better with these improv tips

Management.
Learn how to think on your feet.

Don't be thrown off by a curveball during a meeting. / DIGITAL VISION

By day, Isaac Rodriguez is the CEO of the Provident Loan Society, the 180-year-old nonprofit lender that was founded by business tycoons including J.P. Morgan and Cornelius Vanderbilt. By night, Rodriguez performs as an improv comedian with Artistic New Directions, a theater group in Manhattan.

Rodriguez says he's tried to incorporate several lessons he's learned from his side career as an actor into the corporate world of business. The most significant thing improv has taught him, says Rodriguez, may surprise readers.

"The most important thing would be listening," says Rodriguez. "How important that is, to listen to someone, and how it feels realizing even more how it feels to not be listened to. It's one of the worst feelings."

Rodriguez shares these improv tips for anyone looking to get ahead in the workplace.

Isaac Rodriguez / PROVIDED

Keep the conversation going

The trick to succeeding, says Rodriguez, is not to let the conversation peter out. To do is, Rodriguez says you should use what he calls the "yes, and" principle. "It's an actor's job to justify, make positive choices and respect [the] physical and verbal reality of the scene, for example. Apply that to business," he says. If you end up saying something like "I don't know" or "We can't do that," you are effectively shutting the door to a potential project.

"If I don't listen to [the proposal] and interact and keep that scene going, I would never know what their thoughts were and what they were doing or thinking."

Engage your audience

As anyone who has ever given a presentation or tried to speak with a busy colleague knows, it just takes a moment to lose the interest of your audience. "If an individual is physically involved in something and not verbally responding to you, simply acknowledge it," advises Rodriguez. "Say, 'You're really involved in something, and what we are talking about requires an extensive conversation. What other time can I come in and talk about it?'" Putting someone on the spot forces them to either reschedule or pause and talk to you. h

Branching out

Get out of your comfort zone

Rodriguez says improv classes can help with public speaking. "If you want to push your comfort zone, there are others there who will support you," says Rodriguez. "[There won't] be any negativity, because it's all positive."

Break time. You should really be taking your lunch hour every day

What are you doing for lunch today?

If you're like most workers, you'll be eating at your desk. A 2012 study from Right Management showed that only one in five American employees takes a true lunch break.

"I've found that it's common for people to brag about how they're too busy to eat lunch. And when they do eat, it's at their desks, while staring at a screen," writes Forbes contributor Ruchika Tulshyan in a recent post. Tulshyan also cited an American Journal of Nutrition study showing that eating while distracted may make you eat more, or more quickly, than you normally would.

So tear yourself away from your desk during lunch. It's for your own good. LAKSHMI GANDHI

The benefits

Energy booster

Need another reason to go out for lunch? A 2011 study in Cognition showed that taking a 15- to 20-minute break improves your concentration and energy levels during the day.

Horoscope

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Caution is key. Make sure you play by the rules. Being caught off-guard will end up costing you. Stick to the basics.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Think fast and prepare to defend your actions. A person you thought was on your side will end up disappointing you.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. You will tire quickly if you try to keep up with everyone else. Take care of your responsibilities and let others do the same, and you'll do just fine.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Follow your chosen path. Trying to outperform others will slow you down and damage your reputation. You can get what you want if you are industrious.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. You may be missing a piece of the puzzle regarding your career. Communication difficulties will have to be cleared up.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. A minor monetary gain will be fleeting. It's likely you will receive payment of a debt. Spend cautiously; easy come, easy go.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Love is in the stars. Expect to be called upon to assist a family member. Don't let your desire for riches cause you to fall for a con artist.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. This is not the time for impetuous decisions. You will make better progress if you take matters slowly and methodically. Trust your instincts.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. A hobby will turn out to be an eye-opener. Say yes when a friend offers to introduce you to someone. Don't neglect your duties.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. A former friend will find a way back into your life. You stand to be hurt if you come on too strong.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. A dilemma at home will be upsetting. If you keep your discussions calm and reasonable, you will be able to find solutions that satisfy everyone involved.

Pedestrians should follow the law before getting angry at cyclists

Re: 'Stop hating cyclists' (Metro, Sept. 23) As both a cyclist and pedestrian, I'd like to point out how flagrantly dishonest the anti-bike crowd is. The response to Janice Amato's flawless letter speaks for itself. Not one person rebutted her points, and instead they change the subject, which is a tactic of people who think they are lying.

When we point out pedestrians are the No. 1 lawbreakers in the city, they don't dispute it. They just repeat the mantra: "Stop lawless bicyclists! (But don't stop us lawless pedestrians!)"

They all say, "The law is the law." Then they change their tune as they jaywalk 30 times a day. Is there a single honest person who hates lawless cyclists?

If so, then explain why police should crack down on lawbreaking cyclists but NOT lawbreaking pedestrians. More people die from jaywalking than being hit by cyclists. Facts matter. Your double standard is obscene and corrupt. Get ready to change the subject again!

Nats get no-hitter in finale

With the Nationals already champions of the NL East, their finale against the Marlins on Sunday didn't mean that much. But that didn't stop Jordan Zimmermann from throwing the Nats' first-ever no-hitter in a 10-strikeout performance. The feat was capped by an incredible diving grab by Steven Souza Jr. in left field for the last out in the 1-0 win.

Jets lose third straight, Smith curses out fans

NFL. TV cameras caught the Jets starter shouting at fans after leaving the field to a chorus of boos Sunday.

Moments after the Jets dropped a third straight game with a 24-17 loss to the Lions, quarterback Geno Smith walked off the field to a chorus of boos and heckles. Smith spat on the ground and angrily looked at the crowd before twice uttering "F— you!" at a group of fans.

Despite his meltdown on and off the field, Jets head coach Rex Ryan said Smith will still be his starting quarterback moving forward.

The moment, captured by CBS2's camera, showed a frustrated Smith immediately after yet another subpar performance. Smith finished the game 17-of-33 for 209 yards with a third quarter touchdown but also an interception and a fumble lost. He looked lost in the pocket, consistently overthrew targets and missed open targets down the field on several occasions.

But the moment where his anger spilled over and was directed toward fans has become the ugly takeaway that encapsulates yet another difficult Jets loss.

"I want to apologize if any kid saw me saying any negative remarks walking off the field," Smith said. "I kind of let my temper get the best of me in that situation. It is a learning process. I have to get better with that. I have to let that stuff roll off my back, but today I didn't do well with that."

Smith fell apart after starting the game with three completions in his first four passes. He completed only one of his next eight passes before halftime as the Jets' offense stalled.

Fans began to chant for veteran backup Michael Vick during the third quarter.

"I'm confident in Geno," Ryan said. "If Geno Smith is healthy, Geno Smith starts."

No need to panic

Jets not worried about slow start to season

At 1-3, the Jets aren't where they envisioned themselves being, even as they caution the year just started.

They aren't in panic mode yet, but they aren't doing themselves any favors.

"I think it's still early. We have a lot to change," guard Willie Colon said. "We've got to find it in ourselves to get out of [this]. The worst thing we can do is divide and point the finger. We've just got to look at the tape and find a way to get out of it. Whatever the answer is, we've got to find it."

One problem they'll need to solve is self-inflicted wounds, like the two turnovers and six penalties.

"There's no doubt we're in a hole," head coach Rex Ryan said. "It doesn't get any easier."

KRISTIAN DYER

Quoted

"No matter what happened, I've got to not feed into it. It's part of the job. I understand the fans want to come out and see victories." Smith

What went wrong

STAFFORD FINISHED WITH 293 PASSING YARDS.
GETTY IMAGES

1 Midas touch
With so much attention on Calvin Johnson, the Jets were far more affected by Golden Tate. The Lions receiver signed as a free agent this offseason because he knew he would benefit from the attention given to Johnson. Tate was open plenty on underneath routes and slants. In the first half alone, he had four receptions for 68 yards en route to eight receptions for 116 yards.

2 Over the top
The Jets were in a pretty good spot with 6:19 left in the second quarter. The offense was sputtering, but the Jets were holding up defensively and had kept the score at 3-3. But on third-and-10 from their own 41-yard line, Matthew Stafford found Jeremy Ross for a 59-yard touchdown pass as corner Antonio Allen got toasted and safety Calvin Pryor was late with help.

3 Turnover, turnovers
It was hard to fault the defense in this one, even as they gave up two passing touchdowns and a 1-yard touchdown run to Stafford. The defensive line created good pressure on the Lions and limited their running game. But two turnovers from Geno Smith continued to haunt the offense's ability to move the ball.

3 Jeter saluted the Fenway Park crowd, which applauded him before every at-bat, after he was removed in the third inning.

4 With the Red Sox long out of the postseason race, many Yankees fans made the trip up to see Jeter in his final ever game.

5 Jeter's final at-bat was an RBI single, which scored Ichiro Suzuki. It was Jeter's 3,465th and final hit. He finished sixth all-time, behind only Pete Rose, Ty Cobb, Hank Aaron, Stan Musial and Tris Speaker.
